We Got So Much Belgian Yeast Belgian Pale Ale

Anderson School Brewery

Mark Harris, Mike Green

We're not going to sugarcoat it. We got Belgian Yeast and we're gonna use it... a lot. That's how this works. Our production schedule is dictated by the yeast we choose to make the beer. So, let's make a big ol' beer to make this yeast happy, huh? "We Got So Much Belgian Yeast" is a big, strong Golden Belgian, made with light Pilsen Malts, a touch of breadly Vienna, and Belgian candi sugar. This beer is balanced with by a bouquet of berry-like Mosaic, lemony Meridian and Citra Hops. Finally, our big, bad Belgian Yeast kicks out tons of banana and spicy clove to round it all out. You'll like it. We promise.

On occasion, we sit in the depth of our winters, searching for the inspiration of Spring. Blended over the body of a Lagered Pilsner, The Panichkul features fresh notes of ginger root and lemongrass. The palate is greeted by the snap of ginger, then moves on to crisp herbal notes. You won't find many complex notes playing on the tongue, as this is a Pilsner afterall. Rather, you'll find a crisp herbal beer. Delight in the sneak peek of springtime flavors.

Hillsdale IPA

Hillsdale Brewery

Tyler Newton

The Hillsdale IPA is hop forward, greeting your nose with the pungent, grassy aromas of Mosaic and Citra Hops. A simple grain bill keeps the beer light in color and body, as sweet malts were excluded to avoid overshadowing any hop flavors. Named to pay homage to the very first McMenamins Brewery, opened more than thirty years ago, this classic West Coast Style IPA is a nod to the gods of posterity. So, order a pint and raise a glass to both the best of what's been and what will be!

Devils Lock Helles Bock

High Street Brewery

Hanns Anderson

The Helles Bock style has always been the misfit of the Bock family. After years of being confused with its twin brother Maibock, it's now strong, bitter and angry. Malty and slightly hoppy aromas attack the nose, much like the perfect two-note power chord that assaults the ears and infects the mind with its frantic rhythm. High carbonation levels pop off the tongue in a vocal rage. A bittersweet taste with an alcohol-induced warmth lingers after ingestion, like the ringing in your ears post punk!

The Brown Wizard

Highland Brewery

Ryan Lund

This brew was a collaboration with local psych rockers Máscaras for the McMenamins Sabertooth Micro Fest. Highland Brewer Ryan spoke with drummer Papi about the band's favorite Mexican Lagers (historically derived from traditional Vienna Lagers), and it was decided that a "Mexican Session Ale" would be a fitting complement to the high-energy show that the band is known for. Amber in color, with a hint of malt sweetness and a gently spicy hop character, this thirst-quencher is named after guitarist Carlos' showtime alter ego. As bassist Theo lays down the foundation, raise a glass and celebrate the confluence of beer and music!

The inspiration for this beer is that heavenly nutty, chocolate delight: Nutella. The base beer is an Imperial Porter with just the right amount of sweetness and flavor. Guay Farms in Wilsonville graciously donated 40 pounds of hazelnuts, which we roasted for 20 minutes before adding to the kettle, along with a good amount of cocoa powder. ### Pomelo Gold

The pomelo is a large citrus fruit that's also known as Citrus Maxima. It's the difficulty in getting at the flesh and juice of the Citrus Maxima that became the inspiration behind this uniquely refreshing Golden Ale.
